Abstract: This article takes the political and economic background of Kyrgyzstan's joint construction of the "Belt and Road" in China and "Development of Regional Integration" in Russian projects. The author uses the system and comparative analysis method to analyze the geopolitical modernization construction system from the perspective of political space and economic space respectively. The current situation of political development was analyzed and a spatial model for stable political and economic development was constructed. The research results show that the characteristics of Kyrgyzstan's political space development and economic space development preliminarily verify the applicability and stability of the spatial model built in it, and creative a safe and stable development logic route based on philosophical analysis. From a long-term perspective, this research provide countermeasures and suggestions for Kyrgyzstan's diplomatic cooperation with many countries and its development in the new globalization process.
